The impact of Wilder Business

The UK is facing a nature and climate crises, which has a real-time impact on people and society. Kent Wildlife Trust are working with communities, companies and farmers to achieve a Wilder Kent by 2030. By working together we can restore wild spaces, protect threatened species and create a Wilder Kent for future generations.

For over 65 years we have been learning about our landscape, developing our knowledge and strategies, and implementing real change. We have saved land from development, helped communities design their own projects and supported businesses to become more sustainable.

Furry, feathered and first

As Kent's leading conservation charity, we are proud to have achieved huge milestones for nature. Some of our most ambitious projects are also firsts for the UK, including:

- The re-introduction of free-roaming bison, lost from our landscape for over 6,000 years. The herd are now thriving in West Blean and Thornden Woods, transforming the habitat and boosting biodiversity to create healthier ecosystems.
- In 2001 we introduced two families of beavers into Ham Fen nature reserve to restore one of Kent's last fenland habitats. This project marked the beginning of UK-wide beaver reintroduction programmes supporting wet woodland creation and promoting a climate resilient landscape.
- Missing for over 200 years, red-billed chough, once synonymous with our county can now be seen soaring Kentish skies once again. These iconic and charismatic birds are strengthening coastal biodiversity, and some are even calling Dover Castle home.
